To raiſe a preſent ſumme ; therefore goe forth,
Trie what my credit can in Venice doe,
That ſhall be rackt even to the uttermoſt,
To furniſh thee to Belmount to faire Portia.
Goe preſently enquire, and ſo will I,
Where money is, and I no queſtion make
To have it of my truſt, or for my ſake. Exeunt.

Enter Portia with her wating-woman Nerriſſa.

Por. By my troth Nerriſſa, my little body is aweary of this great world.

Ner. You would be, ſweet Madam, if your miſeries were in the ſame aboundance as your good fortunes are : and yet for ought I ſee, they are as ſick that ſurfeit with too much, as they that ſtarve with nothing ; it is no meane happines therefore to be ſeated in the meane, ſuperfluitie comes ſooner by white haires, but competencie lives longer.

Por. Good ſentences, and well pronounc'd.

Ner. They would be better if well follow'd.

Por. If to do were as eaſie as to know what were good to do, Chappels had beene Churches, and poore mens cottages Princes Pallaces, it is a good divine that followes his owne inſtructions, I can eaſier teach twenty vvhat were good to be done, then to be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching : the braine may deviſe lawes for the blood, but a hote temper leapes ore a cold decree, ſuch a hare is madnes the youth, to skip ore the meſhes of good counſell the cripple ; but this reaſoning is not in the faſhion to chooſe me a husband, ô mee the word chooſe, I may neither chooſe who I would, nor refuſe who I diſlike, ſo is the wil of a lyving daughter curbd by the will of a dead father : is it not harde Nerriſſa, that I cannot chooſe one, nor refuſe none.

Ner. Your Father was ever vertuous, and holy men at their death have good inſpirations, therefore the lottry that he hath deviſed in theſe three cheſts of gold, ſilver, and leade, vvhereof who chooſes his meaning chooſes you, will no doubt never be choſen by any rightly, but one who you ſhall rightly love : But vvhat warmth is there in your affection towards any of theſe Princely ſuters that are already come ?

Por.

Por. I pray thee over-name them, and as thou n will deſcribe them, and according to my deſcrip
my affection.

Ner. Firſt there is the Neopolitane Prince.

Por. I, that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothi his horſe, and he makes it a great appropriation to h parts, that he can ſhooe him himſelfe : I am much a die his mother plaid falſe with a Smith.

Ner. Then is there the Countie Palentine.

Por. He doth nothing but frowne (as who ſhou will not have me, chooſe ; he heares merry tales an feare hee will prove the weeping Philoſopher vvh old, being ſo full of unmannerly ſadneſſe in his you ther be married to a Death's-head with a bone in hi to either of theſe : God defend me from theſe two

Ner. How ſay you by the French Lord, Monſie

Por. God made him, and therefore let him paſſ truth I know it is a ſin to be a mocker, but hee, w horſe better than the Neopolitans, a better bad habite than the Count Palentine, he is every man in no ma ſing, he ſtraight fals a capering, he will fence with
dow. If I ſhould marry him, I ſhould marry twe if he would deſpiſe me, I would forgive him ; for to madneſſe, I ſhall never requite him.

Ner. What ſay you then to Fauconbridge, the of England ?

Por. You know I ſay nothing to him, for he u me, nor I him : he hath neither Latine, French, nor It will come into the Court, and ſweare that I have a worth in the Engliſh : he is a proper mans picture, can converſe with a dumbe ſhow ? how odly he is he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hoſe in Fr
net in Germanie, and his behaviour every where.

Ner. What thinke you of the Scottiſh Lord his

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charitie in hi rowed a box of the eare of the Engliſhman, and ſw pay him againe when he was able : I thinke the F came his Suretie, and ſeal'd under for another.
